WHAT DO YOU BRING TO...

THE TABLE?

HOW to FIGURE OUT WHAT PEOPLE LIKE ABOUT YOU
(and what they don't)

...and HOW to DO SOMETHING ABOUT IT

LIFE (Bringing)
RELATIONSHIP
LIFE
(She is the table)

BY
hoe_math

THE TABLE

a self-awareness exercise

by hoe_math

This packet contains a lot of words and pictures.
It looks complicated at first.

It's not.

It's just a set of instructions for figuring out what people do and do not like about you so you can get better at finding people who like you and being what people like.

And a worksheet with a fun, cartoony visualization of the process.

And some drawings and stuff.

Oh, and a comprehensive guide to the first few steps towards understanding and mastering your own identity (self-actualization).

Okay, fine. It's pretty complicated.

But think of it this way: all you're really doing is listing what you think you "bring to the table," and then finding out if the people you'd like to have in your life agree. The rest is just details.

CONTENTS OF TABLE

1: Cover page
2: Introduction
3: Explaining 'the table'
What is 'the real you?'
4: Why you can't 'be the table'
Figuring it out
5: Why you should know yourself
Getting ready to do the work
6: The 'The Table' Table
7: Instructions
8: The Table (1-sided)
9: The Table (2-sided)

WHAT DO YOU BRING TO THE TABLE?

It's one of the big questions the Internet can't stop asking - and can't seem to answer! No one seems to know what it means.

"I deserve!" chant the women of the Internet. "I deserve better! The best!" "But what do you bring to the table?" ask the men. "I am the table," reply the women.

Wait a minute. What the hell does that even mean? You want to be furniture? You identify as an object to be used at my convenience? You want me to put food on your back?

BEING THE TABLE

Sadly, no! It's even worse! When the girls of the Internet say "I am the table," it means "it's not my responsibility to know what men value, I don't have to put in any effort to be what men want, and I am good enough to be marriage material for any man I can point to without changing anything about myself." And then they get upset when men don't treat them the way they want!

Pretty stupid, huh?

Well, there's also a male version of "I am the table." We don't hear it as much, because no one listens to men or cares about their needs, but a lot of guys are suffering from it anyway. It sounds like this: "I want someone to like me for me."

And here's the thing about that: There is no you. There is no such thing as "the real you" which is separate from "qualities that you have to offer."

WHO ARE YOU?

When you say who you are, you have to be able to name things. Who you are is what people (including yourself) can see about you. It might be your face or body. It might be what you do for work or fun. It might be how people feel around you, or how you treat them. It might be skills you have, things you enjoy, who you're friends with, what you wear, or anything at all, as long as someone can see it and name it.

When people think about "the real me," sometimes they imagine an invisible, unnameable, magical part of the self that is "the most real." But if it's invisible and unnameable, what good is it to anyone else? Imagine the worst person you've ever met saying "I want you to like me for me." Do you like them now? Why not? Because the thing they're calling "me" is what you didn't like about them in the first place! And what is that thing?

Most people reading this will answer: "it's their personality." That would include things like we just named above: how they behave, what they believe, and so on. All of those are things that you can name about you, and things about you are not you.

If that's confusing, think of a few things about your personality that really feel like "this is me." What are they? Something you like or own? Something you've always wanted? Something you do or believe? Once you have a few, remember a time before those things were true, or imagine them changing later. You didn't ALWAYS like Star Wars. You had to watch it first! You didn't believe in Jesus when you were a baby. You didn't even know what words were yet! Are you still a New Yorker if you leave New York?

See? These things can change, and they might change again later, even if you can't see how yet. So forget about "the real you." It doesn't exist. It's just "things about me that I'm attached to," and you can detach if you want. You are your body, your mind (and maybe your soul), your circumstances, and your choices over time. And you can always make new choices. So in a way, you are what you choose to do.

Here's how that works: You start with a thought. You have a lot of thoughts! Start noticing them. Some of your thoughts will become intentions. Some of your intentions will become actions. Actions you choose to take over and over become habits. Habits you keep for a long time become your personality, and they also shape your entire life.

So whatever is true about you today, some of it will always be true (like who your parents are), some of it happened to you without your input (like where you were born), and some of it came from your choices (like your favorite hobby or your choice to stay where you were born - you can change some of your circumstances too).

YOU HAVE THREE OPTIONS

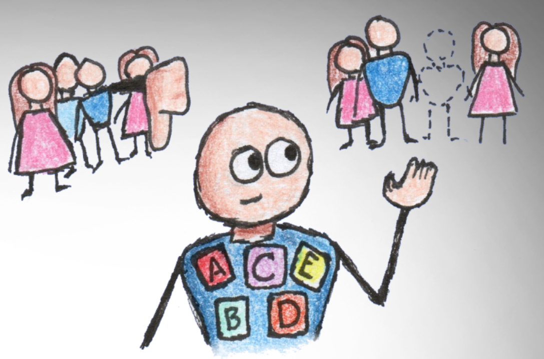
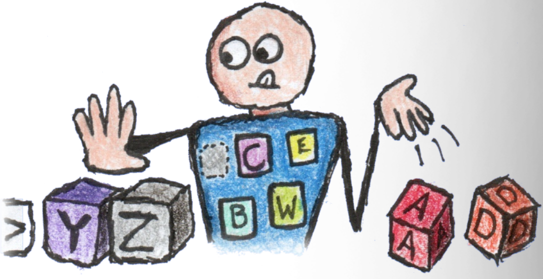
Whatever things there are to see in you, people have the right to like them or not. So if the people you want to accept you aren't doing it yet, there's only a few things you can do about it. 1. You can find people who like you the way you are and who treat you how you want to be treated. 2. You can figure out which things about yourself you have the power to change, and then decide to change them. 3. You can accept your life as it is.



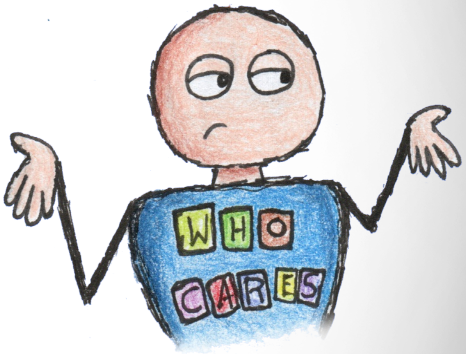
But what you can't do is tell other people to just hurry up and start liking you. No one' s going to do that! Remember the worst person you ever met from the last page? Imagine that person, or someone else you don't like. Imagine all the things you don't like about them. Maybe it's what they look like or talk like, or the way they treat you, or the way they behave. Maybe it's something that's not even their fault, like where they're from! (It's OK to be honest with yourself about what you do and don't like.) Now imagine being around this person right now. They're in the room with you! How does it feel?



Now start liking it. Go ahead and change your mind. Figure out how to like the things about this person that you didn't like a minute ago. Faster! WHY DON'T YOU LIKE THEM YET?

Did that work? Probably not. How did it feel? Probably bad. That's how other people feel when you tell them they should "like you for you" if they don't already. If it doesn't work for you, why would it work for them?

Now imagine that person changing. Everything that you don't like about them slowly changes, bit by bit, into something you like a lot. Maybe they become younger, or more attractive, or more kind, or smarter, or they apologize for something they did, or change what they believe. Maybe they start doing nice things for you. Maybe they put on certain kinds of clothing, speak a certain way, or show off a new skill... whatever makes you happier to see them!



That was a lot easier, wasn't it? When the person changed, you probably liked them more. But when you tried to like them more before they changed, it probably didn't work. And as this person changed into someone you like, you probably noticed that you wanted to treat them differently.

FIGURING IT OUT

Do you understand now? That's the only way you can get people to see you the way you want to be seen. Not by nagging or pressuring them to, but by being someone who they want to see that way.

So when you say "I want someone to like me for me" or "I am the table," what you're actually saying is "I don't want to be what people like, I want them to like what I am." And that doesn't work very well, does it?

I'm not telling you that you're a bad person, or that you're not good enough, or that you have to change. I'm not telling you to fake it. I'm only telling you how to get people to perceive you the way you want them to. If you can find people who already do, that's great! You're all done. For now. And if you haven't found them yet, you can keep looking if you want. But if you keep looking and never find them... maybe it's time to look at yourself.

So you don't have to change anything about yourself if you don't want to! But you cannot expect people who don't like you the way you are to just... start. That's not gonna happen. Plus, you might get all bitter and angry about it over time. "WHY DON'T THEY LIKE ME?!?!!"

So here's what you have to figure out: 1. What do you have to "bring to the table?" 2. Who it is that you want to accept you (can be an individual or a 'type')? 3. Where can you find those people and learn how they feel about you? 4. What else do those people want you to "bring to the table" (or stop bringing)? 5. How much are you willing and able to change?

YOU NEED WHAT YOU NEED

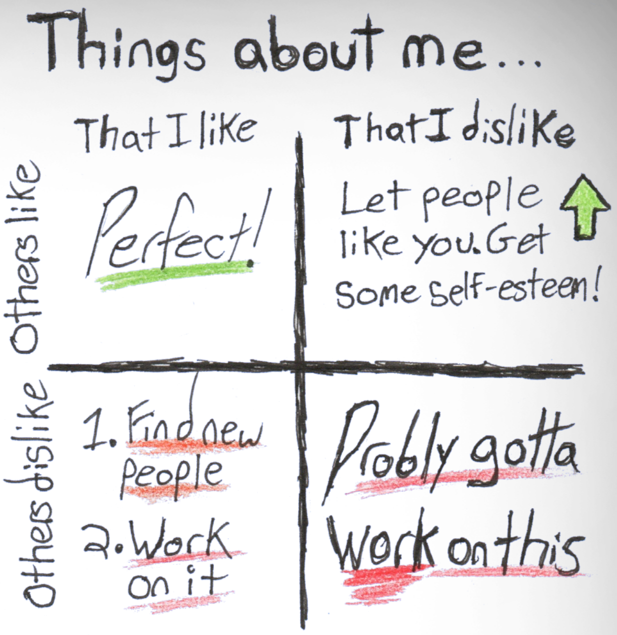
I say this a lot, but I'll say it again because I know a lot of people have a hard time hearing it: Our society loves to tell people things like "you're good enough just the way you are," and "you don't need anyone's approval." And those things aren't actually true - they're just meant to make you feel good about yourself, which isn't always a good thing, especially when it stops you from improving.

In reality, you need the approval of... anyone you want approval from! Like a job that you want to hire you or a girl you want to go out with you, or if you're a woman, every time you have the "what are we?" conversation - that's asking for approval! So it's going to help you immensely to figure out what it is about you that's stopping you from getting the approval that you want, and believing "I'm perfect just the way I am" will not help.

You also can't just sit around feeling bad about yourself. You have to believe that you can change. And if you're not sure about that, I promise you that nearly everybody can. The chances that you are someone who can never self-improve, but you also have the ability to buy and read this packet are close to zero. You just have to do the work! It's worth it!



Things about me...

| | That I like | That I dislike |
|---|---|---|
| Others like | Perfect! | Let people like you. Get Some self-esteem! |
| Others dislike | 1. Find new people2. Work on it | Probly gotta Work on this |

THE TIME THAT SOMEONE WAS HELPFUL

Before we get started, here's a story about when I started looking at myself this way:

I once dated someone I liked quite a bit before she went back to her old boyfriend and got married, but she and I remained friends. She chose to stop seeing me because I was struggling with a few things. She said that was unpleasant for her. The day she broke up with me, I was in a low mood and couldn't get off the couch. Understandable!

As friends, I asked her to explain what caused me to fall short. "What did you notice about me that you didn't like? What did I do that made you notice? What I would have to change to be better to be around?" She told me a few things that I couldn't see about myself, and she gave me specific details about what I did and how it made her feel. She also told me what she did like about me, and nobody had done that before either! I had never actually felt valuable until then, not even when we were dating.

It was a life-changing conversation. It gave me the power to feel good about what she valued in me, and to work directly on what needed to change. It helped turn me into a different and much more likable person. She even took me shopping and showed me what clothes to buy, and they worked! The first time I wore them out, I got attention like I had never gotten before. Girls just looked straight at me and waited.

If you can find someone like this (someone who you would want to date but doesn't quite return your feelings), and that person is willing to be honest and helpful with you, that can be one of the most powerful ways to change yourself quickly. If every young woman asked for an exit interview like this at the end of her situationships and learned from them, we'd be on our way to fixing dating culture!

GET STARTED

Okay! That's enough explanation and backstory. If you don't get it after reading all that, you probably never will.

Starting on the next page, you should have something to take notes on. You're going to start building self-awareness by writing down a list of things about yourself that a specific person or 'type' might value about you, and then actually testing it by asking other people to tell you how much they value those things. Use letters (A. B. C. etc.) for your list.

When you're done, you will understand a lot more clearly what it is that you "bring to the table," and what you want others to bring, too. And if you do it right, this could save you a huge amount of frustration, heartbreak, trouble, and wasted time.

REMEMBER! What you "bring to the table" is not just about paying bills! That's only part of it! It's everything about you that other people can see. It's your physical traits, the way you treat people, the benefits of being close to you, things you might have in common with others, and so on. ALSO REMEMBER! You don't get to tell other people what to like! If you think your partner should like your tattoo that spells out "No Ragrets" in spider web letters and he doesn't, YOU ARE WRONG.

THE 'THE TABLE' TABLE

The 'The Table' Table can help you figure out what you bring to The Table (the final worksheet in this packet). You can use The Table alone, in a group, with friends, or with someone vaguely in or near your dating pool. My content is still mostly about dating right now, so I designed The 'The Table' Table around that.

If you want to use The Table for other purposes, like finding or strengthening friendships or getting hired at your dream job, you're going to need to do a little more footwork. I can't make a chart about everything! Ignore the dating-oriented The 'The Table' Table, and skip to Coming to the Table.

INSTRUCTIONS: Use The 'The Table' Table to help you quickly understand what you're both looking for. Remember, your goal is to be what they want and not to tell them to want what you are.

The categories depicted on the The 'The Table' Table (in colored pencil scribbles) are from Zones v3, my revolutionary dating map (find it on my Patreon shop in the Chart Pack or in The Primordial hoe_math Collection on Amazon (as of February 2025)).

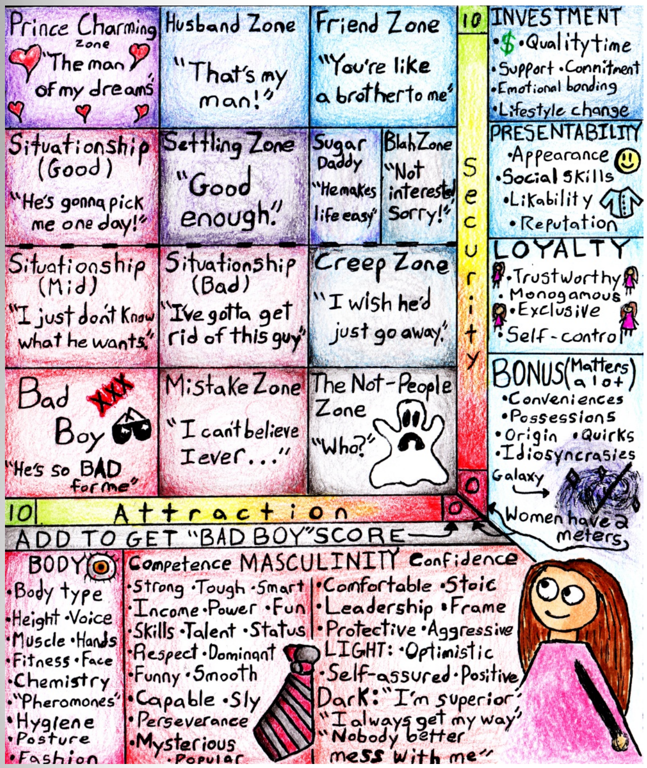
I explained each category to get you started. Men use the top section (plus "body"), women use the bottom. You should list good things that you think people would like, and also things they might not like, but are a part of who you are anyway. Write them down in a list. Use letters (A. B. C...). Get specific! Don't just say "I'm nice," say "I like cooking big dinners together," or something. Finally, use numbers to list traits that you do and don't want from your partner.



Prince Charming Zone
"The man of my dreams"
Husband Zone
"That's my man!"
Friend Zone
"You're like a brother to me"
10
INVESTMENT
•$ •Quality time
•Support •Commitment
•Emotional bonding
•Lifestyle change
Situationship (Good)
"He's gonna pick me one day!"
Settling Zone
"Good enough."
Sugar Daddy
"He makes life easy"
Blah Zone
"Not interested Sorry!"
Security
PRESENTABILITY
•Appearance
•Social skills
•Likability
•Reputation
Situationship (Mid)
"I just don't know what he wants."
Situationship (Bad)
"I've gotta get rid of this guy"
Creep Zone
"I wish he'd just go away."
LOYALTY
•Trustworthy
•Monogamous
•Exclusive
•Self-control
Bad Boy
XXX
"He's so BAD for me"
Mistake Zone
"I can't believe I ever..."
The Not-People Zone
"Who?"
BONUS (Matters a lot)
•Conveniences
•Possessions
•Origin •Quirks
•Idiosyncrasies
Galaxy
0
10
Attraction
0
ADD TO GET "BAD BOY" SCORE
Women have 2 meters
BODY
•Body type
•Height •Voice
•Muscle •Hands
•Fitness •Face
•Chemistry
•"Pheromones"
•Hygiene
•Posture
•Fashion
Competence MASCULINITY Confidence
•Strong •Tough •Smart
•Income •Power •Fun
•Skills •Talent •Status
•Respect •Dominant
•Funny •Smooth
•Capable •Sly
•Perseverance
•Mysterious
•Popular
•Comfortable •Stoic
•Leadership •Frame
•Protective •Aggressive
LIGHT: •Optimistic
•Self-assured •Positive
Dark: "I'm superior"
"I always get my way"
"Nobody better mess with me"

INVESTMENT: This is what you give her to prove you're committed, like an engagement ring. It's usually material or emotional support, time, effort, bonding, trust, showing her off in public so everyone knows you're taken, or big changes like moving to a new place or changing your religion for her. The more it costs you, the more it means!

PRESENTABILITY: This is how you make her look when you're seen together. Are you respected? Are you put together? Do people like you and trust you? Are you known for anything? How will that reflect on her?

LOYALTY: This is how much she can trust you not to get bored of her and leave or run off and spend all your investment on other women, or to get involved with them at all. It's also how stable you can keep your life. She needs to feel secure!

BONUS: This is lots of little things that 'come with' you. Do you live somewhere cool? Do you have a pet she likes? Do you both like the same brand of clothing or kind of movie? Girls are more into this stuff than we are. Pay attention to what 'comes with' you - and what doesn't!

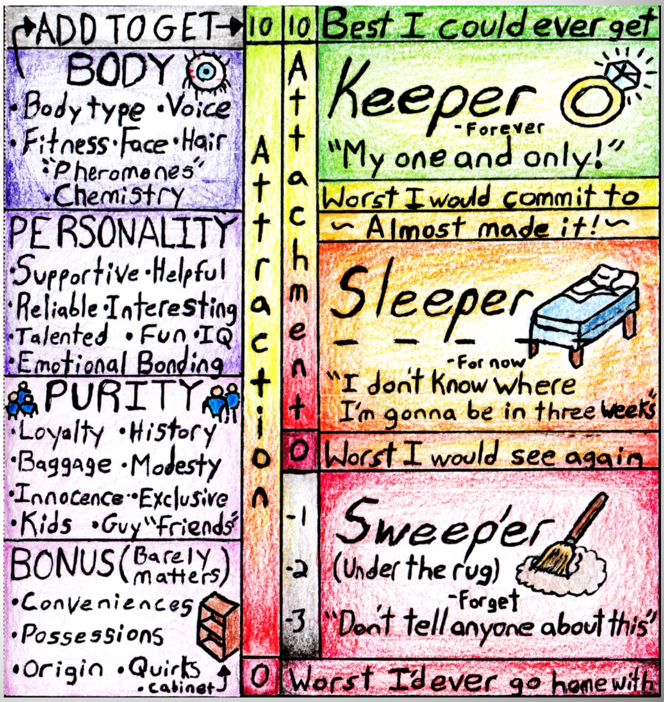
MASCULINITY: This one is hard for modern men to understand! Women want you to be good at stuff that matters to them (Competence) and they want you to know what you're doing so they can relax around you (Confidence). The most popular types of Competence are physical ability, dominance, making money, skill, humor, intelligence, talent, and status/popularity. Anything that shows "I know how to make life good!" Confidence is just the way you express your Competence. No woman wants to date a man who's insecure and afraid, even if he's competent! Be good at things and then say "yeah, I'm good. I got it."

BODY: For Men: This is also tough for some men to understand: women like men's bodies just as much as we like theirs! They're just a lot more picky, so it's harder for us to be the objects of their desire. Men and women look for different traits, but they like attractive bodies just as much as we do! Listen to them and make the changes that make them like you. Sometimes, it's just wardrobe and a haircut! For women: Try not to get caught up in competing with the girls over the popular look. Men have different tastes, and they're not lying about what they like! If he says "I don't like makeup," he probably doesn't like makeup, and he seems attracted to you, he probably is! The most common improvement a woman needs here is just "lose weight." This is way simpler for you!

PERSONALITY: This is like "Investment," "Presentability," and "Femininity" all in one. Men want to enjoy your company and respect your mind. We want you to make our lives easier, not harder. We want to be proud to be seen with you, and to know that you come from a good history and similar social status. Stop saying men are "intimidated" by you! That's almost never true! They just don't like the sort of person you are!

PURITY: This is like "Loyalty," minus the need for investment. We want to know that you haven't had a checkered past, that you're not running around at night tempting other men, that you don't have kids or crazy exes that will become problems for us, and that you're not "friends" with too many of the wrong guys, who are just waiting for you to get upset one day so they can manipulate your emotions for their own ends.

BONUS: Same as the guy Bonus, but it doesn't matter as much to us.



ADD TO GET
BODY
•Body type •Voice
•Fitness •Face •Hair
•"Pheromones"
•Chemistry
PERSONALITY
•Supportive •Helpful
•Reliable •Interesting
•Talented •Fun •IQ
•Emotional Bonding
PURITY
•Loyalty •History
•Baggage •Modesty
•Innocence •Exclusive
•Kids •Guy "Friends"
BONUS (Barely matters)
•Conveniences
•Possessions
•Origin •Quirks
•cabinet
10
Attraction
0
10
Attachment
0
-1
-2
-3
Best I could ever get Keeper
-Forever
"My one and only!"
Worst I would commit to ~Almost made it!~
Sleeper
-For now
"I don't know where I'm gonna be in three weeks"
Worst I would see again
Sweeper
(Under the rug)
-Forget
"Don't tell anyone about this"
Worst I'd ever go home with

THE 'THE TABLE' TABLE

This is an expansion on the categories from Zones v3. It is a list to help you get started on understanding what the opposite sex is looking for in a mate.

BELONGING

CULTURE
- Country • Religion • Regional
- Language • Institutions (school etc.)
- Subculture (music, games, etc.)

RELATIONSHIPS
- Family • Friends Workplace
- Dating History • Connections
- Who you spend your time with

PARTICIPATION
- Friend groups • Activities • Political groups • Religious services • Public service • Groups you belong to (sport teams, associations, volunteering etc.)

ORIGIN
- Where you're from • Religion
- Where you grew up/lived
- How you were raised • Ancestry

LIFE STORY
What's important about the way you've lived your life?

MIND

ABILITIES
- Talents • Hobbies • Passions • Skills • Drive
- Experience • Willpower • Self-Control

PERSONALITY
- Traits (funny, introverted etc.)
- Beliefs (religious, morals, values, etc)
- Weaknesses (perfectionist, short temper, etc)
- Intelligence • Education
- Individuality • Self-Awareness
- Behaviors • Likes + dislikes
- Quirks • Attitude • Habits
- Plans (dreams, future etc.)

IDENTITY
- Most important things about you
- What makes you different /unique
- Family (father, wife, etc)
- What you do (job, purpose etc)
- Important experiences
- Type (nerd, outdoorsy, etc)
- Pursuits (sport fan, gamer etc.)

BODY

THE WAY YOU WERE BORN
- Looks/face • Height • Age
- Body Type • Ethnicity • Brains/IQ
- Features • Voice • Strength/power
- Genetics • Coordination
- Family history • Health

WHAT YOU DID WITH IT
- Fitness • Health choices
- Fashion/style • Grooming
- Weight • Athletic
- Condition

SITUATION

SOCIAL STATUS
- Family • Wealth • Fame • Popularity
- Job position • Connections
- Reputation • Notoriety • Privilege
- Member of important group

BONUS
- Things you have that are not you
- Possessions, access, etc.

ROLES
- Relationships (mother, leader etc.)
- Job/career • Duties • Importance

LOCATION
- Region • Neighborhood
- Traveling • Distance

COMMITMENTS
- Family • Job • Caretaking
- Home ownership • Business

There are more things about you than anyone can write on a page! Use this visual aid to help you get started and give you ideas. Pay attenion to everything about you that might change how somebody feels about you, including negative things. Those go on the table too! You can't hide being married with three kids while you get to know someone! HAHAHA just kidding someone did that to me last year.

COMING TO THE TABLE

Great! Now you have a list of things to put on The Table. That doesn't mean it's everything you have to offer - there might be good things about you that you forgot, and there might be bad ones, too! And depending on who you talk to, something you think is good about you might be bad to someone else, or the other way around, and something you think matters a lot about you might not matter at all to them.

That's the entire point of the exercise! You're going to go person by person and gradually learn about yourself by listening to what they do and don't want from you.

You can also make several lists about yourself - one for each type of relationship you want to improve. You could have one for finding work, one for getting along better with your family, and even one for dating college-grad office worker girls, and another for dating country-music cowgirls! You can use The Table with everyone you want to date seriously, if they're into it. (It's a bit nerdy, but some people think that's fun!) Remember, everyone likes different things, so everyone will see a different 'you.' Balance changing with being who you are!

I recommend using The Table with someone whose approval you care about. You should avoid using it with people whose opinions you don't care about. You don't need everyone to like you, But you do need some. The sooner you learn how to be what they want, the better.

You can use The Table alone. It won't be as powerful, but it will help you think about yourself through someone else's eyes. You should learn as soon as you can that other people to have totally valid feelings that make no sense to you.

You don't have to use The Table with others, or even tell them about it. You can still use The Table to guess what people think about you, and then go test your assumptions in real life. Be clever about it! Show off one of your traits and see how people respond. Take notes!

INSTRUCTIONS (with a partner):

1. Get out your list of things that you bring to the table.

2. Print out The Table worksheet (there's one for sitting on the same side of the table as your partner and one for opposite sides).

3. Be clear about the relationship that you're discussing, and who you're discussing it with. Fill out the names of the players in the 'name' boxes, and name the relationship, too.

4. Both players fill out the "BRING" part of The Table. Use your letters so you don't have to re-write your whole list.

The BRING sections of The Table are divided into WON'T BRING, WILL BRING, and WANT/NEED TO BRING. These mean "things I don't want to be asked for, (WON'T)" "things I will bring if I have to (WILL)," and "things I enjoy bringing and want to be appreciated," OR "things that come with me whether you like it or not (WANT/NEED)." Add to your list at any time!

5. Once the BRING sections of The Table are full, take turns placing your partner's BRING items into your WANT section. This will go faster if you trade lists so you don't have to read them one at a time.

The WANT section is also divided into NEED, WOULD BE NICE, DON'T CARE, and PLEASE NO. This is where you tell each other how you feel about the traits your partner listed. Do you NEED them in order to be happy with the relationship? Would it BE NICE, but it's not necessary? Do you NOT CARE? Or do you actually not like that trait at all and would rather it was gone? Be honest, or The Table doesn't work! This is where you learn what others think about what you bring!

6. Finally, take turns one more time, this time naming things you NEED from your partner or that WOULD BE NICE, or that you don't want (PLEASE NO) but which are not on the board yet. The numbers will help you keep them separate (1. 2. 3...).

These can be traits that your partner does have or does not have. In other words, you can say "I wish you would..." and name something that's missing, or you can say "I don't know if you're aware, but something I like about you / don't like about you is..." and name something your partner did not name on their own list. Don't get upset! Honesty is important!

7. Now that The Table is full, you and your partner can easily talk about the items on it! Start by crossing off all the items that match. For instance, if you NEED her to have long hair, and she WANTS to or WILL do that, you're all set! No need to discuss. Look at whatever is left over, and discuss anything you're comfortable with. Either player can change their mind at any time about what they WANT, NEED, WILL BRING, WON'T BRING, etc. Stop whenever you want, and come back to The Table later on if you choose to.

8. Use the GIVE and GET meters (or write in a percentage) to show how happy you are with what you GIVE and GET in this relationship. Use pencil so you can change it later! Change it whenever you revisit The Table.

INSTRUCTIONS (alone):

Follow the instructions above, filling out your own sections in the same way, and your absent partner's sections in the way you imagine they would fill them out. If you want to test your assumptions about how that person would feel, try to find some way to show them the trait of yours that you want feedback on in a normal interaction with them, and notice how they respond. Take notes and make changes on your own to track how things are going.

THE TABLE

RELATIONSHIP:

NAME:

WANT
BRING
NEED
WANT/NEED TO BRING
WOULD BE NICE
WILL BRING
DON'T CARE
WON'T / DON'T WANT TO BRING
PLEASE NO
GET
GIVE
WANT/NEED TO BRING NEED
WILL BRING
WOULD BE NICE
WON'T / DON'T WANT TO BRING
DON'T CARE
PLEASE NO
GIVE GET NAME:
BRING
WANT

THE TABLE by hoe_math

NAME:
RELATIONSHIP:
NEED
WOULD BE NICE
DON'T CARE
PLEASE NO
WANT/NEED to BRING
WILL BRING
WON'T / DON'T WANT TO BRING GIVE
GET THE TABLE
BRING WANT
NAME: RELATIONSHIP:
NEED
WOULD BE NICE
DON'T CARE
PLEASE NO
WANT/NEED TO BRING
WILL BRING
WON'T / DON'T WANT TO BRING GIVE
GET THE TABLE
BRING
WANT